

The coronation was attended by a crowd of 7,500 dignitaries, politicians and notable peers.

It was a cause for nationwide celebration, with millions joining in any way they could.

Festivities spread far and wide: the procession route was lined from start to finish with people eager to catch even the briefest glimpse.

All aspects of the royal family's life are the subject of public interest, right down to the famous corgis.

Her Majesty riding sidesaddle in the uniform of the Grenadier Guards. From parades to a day at the races, The Queen's love of horses is quite evident.

Prince Charles married Lady Diana Spencer to scenes of jubilation on 29 June 1981.

A military parade – just one part of Her Majesty’s role in the forces.

Five days after Diana’s tragic death, The Queen and Prince Philip view floral tributes outside the gates of Buckingham Palace.

The Queen Mother shares a joke with Prince Charles during a pageant to celebrate her 100th birthday.

Thousands flooded The Mall to honour The Queen’s Golden Jubilee, marking 50 years on the throne.

