

A column of men on a hunger march trudge through the rain on their way to London. The contingent towards the back is from Edinburgh.

Hunger marchers climb the railings of Hyde Park during the culmination of their efforts, a protest rally against the Means Test on 27 October 1932.

British Union of Fascists nuptials. T. Naylor and Edith Taylor seen leaving the Free Catholic Church, Edmonton, through a fascist guard of honour after their wedding on 5 February 1934. The happy couple were both keen Blackshirt hikers, having done the walk from Lands End to John o' Groats.

Princess Margaret Rose and Princess Elizabeth with their mother the Duchess of York and their aunt the Duchess of Kent at the celebrations to mark their grandfather's twenty-five years on the throne with a service of thanksgiving at St Paul's Cathedral on 6 May 1935. The Duke of York (within eighteen months to be King George VI) and the Duke of Kent can be glimpsed in the background.

Local residents crowd round the gates of Sandringham, Norfolk, to read the bulletin about the illness of George V being put up by the lodge-keeper's wife on 19 January 1936. The King died the next day.